EDITORIAL

We're Better than this ...Aren't We?

It's not that I'm tired. It's not that I am giving up. But then again, I am very weary and the thoughts I have of giving up appear regularly in my consciousness and dreams. Mass shooting, the destruction of the endangered species protection act, the ADA, the climate protection decimated, civil and voting rights under attack, children in cages, parents separated from their children, and so much more, all done under the evil knife of dTrump and the GOP'pers. Twice recently, I have been verbally attacked, albeit nothing new for me, but these two events have been aimed at me during meetings where I have legal standing and permission to speak.

My weariness translates into words echoing from my male parental unit, "Shut up, Stupid." Or, "You (meaning me) have no right to speak." Mother liked, however, "Sticks and stones will break your bones, but words will never hurt you."

As the deficit chalks up another trillion, more words are shouted, "It's the economy, Stupid." "It's the high employment numbers!" You-know-who openly promotes white supremacy — racism and misogamy. Under the supervision of dTrump and collusion with Netanyahu, two members of the United States Congress were denied admittance to Israel — to be rescinded, it they would sign an agreement — a gag order. Personally, I concur with ending aid to that country — a country where citizens have millions of dollars in support from the U.S. resulting in free health care, abortion on demand and great monetary support of higher education for their citizenry.

We are in the fight of our lives — our very lives are in grave danger.

Voices of the people are being heard. Just this past week a football game between a Plano High School (where the recent shooter went to school) and the El Paso high school located close to ground zero of the recent attack was cancelled. The Plano Independent School District ruled they were fearful there would be trouble. The public outcry, however, shouted down the district and the game was put back on the football season schedule.

Friends have commented on my "guts" to wear my tee shirt: "Adios, Trump —Vote for Julián Castro!" in Collin County. During a recent trip to Costco in Plano, I had five different people and groups stop me and give me a thumbs up! This is similar to responses I have gotten when I have worn my Elizabeth Warren shirt - "A President Money CAN'T BUY!"

The Austin-American Statesman (8/6/19) asked this question, "We're Better than this ... Aren't We?" Each of us must answer this question with courage and action regardless of our tiredness.

There will be no change in Lady Liberty's, "Give me your tired, your poor, /Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free, /The wretched refuse of your teeming shore./ Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me, /I lift my lamp beside the golden door!" (Emma Lazarus)

We will not, cannot be silenced. We are better than this, "We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union; establish justice; insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and insure the blessings of liberty do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United State of America."

And, get out the vote!

“The Fed”

The Fed sounds like a federal law enforcement agency. It is not. The Fed is a short term for the Federal Reserve Central Banking System, the central banking system of the United States. It performs five general functions to promote the effective operation of the U.S. economy and, more generally, the public interest.

The Federal Reserve:

- 1. Conducts the nation’s monetary policy of maximum employment, stable prices, and moderate long-term interest rates in the U.S. economy;
- 2. Promotes the stability of the financial system and seeks to minimize and contain systemic risks through active monitoring and engagement in the U.S. and abroad;
- 3. Promotes the safety and soundness of individual financial institutions and monitors their impact on the financial system as a whole;
- 4. Fosters payment and settlement system safety and efficiency through services to the banking industry and the U.S. government that facilitate U.S.-dollar transactions and payments; and
- 5. Promotes consumer protection and community development through consumer-focused supervision and examination, research and analysis of emerging consumer issues and trends, community economic development activities, and the administration of consumer laws and regulations.

<https://www.federalreserve.gov/aboutthefed.htm>

The Fed attempts to ensure a stable and secure banking system by adjusting the Federal Fund Rate, the interest banks and credit unions charge each other to borrow funds held at Federal Reserve banks. When a bank or credit union, has excess funds in its reserve account, it can lend the excess funds to institutions in need of funds to meet their minimum reserve requirement. The Federal Fund rate is currently 2.25 percent.

In the 1980’s the Federal Fund Rate hit 19.04 percent. It was a tough time to get a mortgage.

The Federal Fund Rate does not control mortgage rates but it can influence the rate when the fund rate is raised or lowered. The mortgage rate is typically 3 to 5 percent higher than the Federal Fund rate. Mortgage rates, car loan rates, and credit card interest rates are driven up or down by competition and the Federal Reserve has no control of the rate. When the interest is too low people will spend too much and save too little resulting in runaway inflation. If the interest rate is too high spending will be dampened and the economy will slump.

A bank or credit union can borrow money at 2.41 percent and loan that money to you at any rate the market will bare. The Bankrate, LLC Company (www.Bankrate.com) states the average credit card interest rate is 17.85 percent per year. Translation: If you borrow $1,000 from a bank that paid $24.10 to borrow from a Federal Reserve Bank, in one year you will pay the bank $178.50.

From our kitchen table: The interest rate on a replacement credit card charge (we received one this week from Bank of America) is 19.24 percent per year. If we only pay the monthly interest, in one year we will pay the bank $192.24 (as an FYI: we have a good credit rating).

Summary: What does the Federal Reserve do? It protects banks and credit unions. The FED does one more thing. Sooner or later it irritates every politician.

Domestic Terrorism

Judge Tina Clinton

Blog: Insights and Ruminations on Criminal Law

I decided to blog on this topic because of the questions raised by the killings in El Paso. The El Paso DA has already stated that he would seek the death penalty under Texas criminal laws under capital murder charges. But we have also heard the FBI was investigating this as a “domestic terrorism” case. What exactly does that mean and will be a greater charge than the state level offense of capital murder?

The U.S. Patriot Act defined domestic terrorism. It involves an act or activities that

- (1) are dangerous to human life in violation of criminal laws of the U.S. or any state;
- (2) that appears to be intended to intimidate/coerce a civilian population, influence a policy of a government, or affect the conduct of a government by mass destruction/assassinations/ kidnaping destruction/assassination/kidnaping; and
- (3) occurs primarily in the territorial jurisdiction of the US. And while we have this definition for purposes of an investigation, there is no federal criminal offense that an individual or individuals can be charged with for these acts. It’s not even an enhancement law, meaning that the charges cannot be made more severe because of the designation of this act as one of domestic terrorism.

Recent articles from major news channels have quoted the FBI in their June congressional testimony stating that they had approximately 850 open domestic terrorism investigations. The number of actual attacks carried out by domestic terrorists have risen and 40 percent are motivated by race.

Let’s look at why these laws differ from the designations foreign terrorism. U.S. laws define and have laws penalizing foreign terrorism. In fact, it’s a federal crime to offer any material support to a foreign terrorist organization. But the First Amendment makes it hard to treat groups based in the U.S. the same way. The First Amendment protects free speech regardless of one’s ideology, including hateful ideology.

In the Oklahoma bombing of 1995, Timothy McVeigh was prosecuted and given the death penalty under federal law. The charges were using a weapon of mass destruction, conspiracy use of a weapon of mass destruction, destructive use of explosives or incendiary devices, eight counts of murder of federal law enforcement officers and 160 counts of murder of others. Though he is thought of as a domestic terrorist, no domestic terrorism charges were included. He was given the lethal injection in 2001 under federal laws.

What federal charges will come in the El Paso case? Only time will tell with the conclusion of the FBI investigation. Hate crimes charges or murder charges are possible but that will ultimately be decided by the US Attorney and the federal government. In the meanwhile, we do know that the El Paso DA has already filed paperwork giving notice to the defense about his intentions.

I grieve for the families, victims and the community of El Paso. As we try to grapple with what has happened, I hope this blog at least helps a reader that is trying to understand some of the information that is coming out now regarding this senseless act of violence.

“We Have Nothing to Fear but Fear Itself!”

I am certain that my fellow Americans expect that on my induction into the Presidency I will address them with a candor and a decision which the present situation of our people impel. This is preeminently the time to speak the truth, the whole truth, frankly and boldly. Nor need we shrink from honestly facing conditions in our country today. This great Nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper. So, first of all, let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance. In every dark hour of our national life a leadership of frankness and vigor has met with that understanding and support of the people themselves which is essential to victory. I am convinced that you will again give that support to leadership in these critical days.

In such a spirit on my part and on yours we face our common difficulties. They concern, thank God, only material things. Values have shrunken to fantastic levels; taxes have risen; our ability to pay has fallen; government of all kinds is faced by serious curtailment of income; the means of exchange are frozen in the currents of trade; the withered leaves of industrial enterprise lie on every side; farmers find no markets for their produce; the savings of many years in thousands of families are gone.

More important, a host of unemployed citizens face the grim problem of existence, and an equally great number toil with little return. Only a foolish optimist can deny the dark realities of the moment.

Yet our distress comes from no failure of substance. We are stricken by no plague of locusts. Compared with the perils which our forefathers conquered because they believed and were not afraid, we have still much to be thankful for. Nature still offers her bounty and human efforts have multiplied it. Plenty is at our doorstep, but a generous use of it languishes in the very sight of the supply. Primarily this is because the rulers of the exchange of mankind's goods have failed, through their own stubbornness and their own incompetence, have admitted their failure, and abdicated. Practices of the unscrupulous money changers stand indicted in the court of public opinion, rejected by the hearts and minds of men.

True they have tried, but their efforts have been cast in the pattern of an outworn tradition. Faced by failure of credit they have proposed only the lending of more money. Stripped of the lure of profit by which to induce our people to follow their false leadership, they have resorted to exhortations, pleading tearfully for restored confidence. They know only the rules of a generation of self-seekers. They have no vision, and when there is no vision the people perish. The money changers have fled from their high seats in the temple of our civilization. We may now restore that temple to the ancient truths.

The measure of the restoration lies in the extent to which we apply social values more noble than mere monetary profit.

Happiness lies not in the mere possession of money; it lies in the joy of achievement, in the thrill of creative effort. The joy and moral stimulation of work no longer must be forgotten in the mad chase of evanescent profits. These dark days will be worth all they cost us if they teach us that our true destiny is not to be ministered unto but to minister to ourselves and to our fellow men.

Recognition of the falsity of material wealth as the standard of success goes hand in hand with the abandonment of the false belief that public office and high political position are to be valued only by the standards of pride of place and personal profit; and there must be an end to a conduct in banking and in business which too often has given to a sacred trust the likeness of callous and selfish wrongdoing. Small wonder that confidence languishes, for it thrives only on honesty, on honor, on the sacredness of obligations, on faithful protection, on unselfish performance; without them it cannot live.

Restoration calls, however, not for changes in ethics alone. This Nation asks for action, and action now.

Our greatest primary task is to put people to work. This is no unsolvable problem if we face it wisely and courageously. It can be accomplished in part by direct recruiting by the Government itself, treating the task as we would treat the emergency of a war, but at the same time, through this employment, accomplishing greatly needed projects to stimulate and reorganize the use of our natural resources.

Hand in hand with this we must frankly recognize the overbalance of population in our industrial centers and, by engaging on a national scale in a redistribution, endeavor to provide a better use of the land for those best fitted for the land. The task can be helped by definite efforts to raise the values of agricultural products and with this the power to purchase the output of our cities. It can be helped by preventing realistically the tragedy of the growing loss through foreclosure of our small homes and our farms. It can be helped by insistence that the Federal, State, and local governments act forthwith on the demand that their cost be drastically reduced. It can be helped by the unifying of relief activities which today are often scattered, uneconomical, and unequal. It can be helped by national planning for and supervision of all forms of transportation and of communications and other utilities which have a definitely public character.

There are many ways in which it can be helped, but it can never be helped merely by talking about it. We must act and act quickly.

Finally, in our progress toward a resumption of work we require two safeguards against a return of the evils of the old order; there must be a strict supervision of all banking and credits and investments; there must be an end to speculation with other people's money, and there must be provision for an adequate but sound currency.

GARLAND DEMOCRATIC VOICE

FDR'S FIRST INAUGURAL ADDRESS

There are the lines of attack. I shall presently urge upon a new Congress in special session detailed measures for their fulfillment, and I shall seek the immediate assistance of the several States.

Through this program of action we address ourselves to putting our own national house in order and making income balance outgo. Our international trade relations, though vastly important, are in point of time and necessity secondary to the establishment of a sound national economy. I favor as a practical policy the putting of first things first. I shall spare no effort to restore world trade by international economic readjustment, but the emergency at home cannot wait on that accomplishment.

The basic thought that guides these specific means of national recovery is not narrowly nationalistic. It is the insistence, as a first consideration, upon the interdependence of the various elements in all parts of the United States—a recognition of the old and permanently important manifestation of the American spirit of the pioneer. It is the way to recovery. It is the immediate way. It is the strongest assurance that the recovery will endure.

In the field of world policy I would dedicate this Nation to the policy of the good neighbor—the neighbor who resolutely respects himself and, because he does so, respects the rights of others—the neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors.

If I read the temper of our people correctly, we now realize as we have never realized before our interdependence on each other; that we can not merely take but we must give as well; that if we are to go forward, we must move as a trained and loyal army willing to sacrifice for the good of a common discipline, because without such discipline no progress is made, no leadership becomes effective. We are, I know, ready and willing to submit our lives and property to such discipline, because it makes possible a leadership which aims at a larger good. This I propose to offer, pledging that the larger purposes will bind upon us all as a sacred obligation with a unity of duty hitherto evoked only in time of armed strife.

With this pledge taken, I assume unhesitatingly the leadership of this great army of our people dedicated to a disciplined attack upon our common problems.

Action in this image and to this end is feasible under the form of government which we have inherited from our ancestors. Our Constitution is so simple and practical that it is possible always to meet extraordinary needs by changes in emphasis and arrangement without loss of essential form. That is why our constitutional system has proved itself the most superbly enduring political mechanism the modern world has produced.

It has met every stress of vast expansion of territory, of foreign wars, of bitter internal strife, of world relations

It is to be hoped that the normal balance of executive and legislative authority may be wholly adequate to meet the unprecedented task before us. But it may be that an unprecedented demand and need for undelayed action may call for temporary departure from that normal balance of public procedure.

I am prepared under my constitutional duty to recommend the measures that a stricken nation in the midst of a stricken world may require. These measures, or such other measures as the Congress may build out of its experience and wisdom, I shall seek, within my constitutional authority, to bring to speedy adoption.

But in the event that the Congress shall fail to take one of these two courses, and in the event that the national emergency is still critical, I shall not evade the clear course of duty that will then confront me. I shall ask the Congress for the one remaining instrument to meet the crisis—broad Executive power to wage a war against the emergency, as great as the power that would be given to me if we were in fact invaded by a foreign foe.

For the trust reposed in me I will return the courage and the devotion that befit the time. I can do no less.

We face the arduous days that lie before us in the warm courage of the national unity; with the clear consciousness of seeking old and precious moral values; with the clean satisfaction that comes from the stern performance of duty by old and young alike. We aim at the assurance of a rounded and permanent national life.

We do not distrust the future of essential democracy. The people of the United States have not failed. In their need they have registered a mandate that they want direct, vigorous action. They have asked for discipline and direction under leadership. They have made me the present instrument of their wishes. In the spirit of the gift I take it.

In this dedication of a Nation we humbly ask the blessing of God. May He protect each and every one of us. May He guide me in the days to come.

Frances Pounds Gosnell
11/ 25/39 - 7/30/19

We mark the passing of Fran Gosnell.
We extend our condolences to her family and friends.

Fran Gosnell was a friend to all.

A Democrat's, Democrat, Fran worked tirelessly to promote the Democratic Party, in her neighborhood, city and county to get out the vote making phone calls, knocking on doors, serving as an election clerk and supporting Democratic elected officials, candidates and causes.

She graduated from Hamburg High School in 1958, where she was a cheerleader, homecoming maid, Miss Hamburg, Arkansas and Miss Sunset 1957. A resident of the Dallas area for over 50 years, she was an artist, an art teacher and an active member of the Garland art community. Frances enjoyed painting and gardening in her yard.

Fran is survived by her husband of 56 years, Tommy Gosnell and son, Greg Gosnell of Garland; a sister, Gwen Fischer, a host of nieces and nephews and a multitude of friends.

Our beloved friend will remain in our hearts forever. She showed us the way to live and be the best person possible. May She rest in peace

A memorial service to honor Frances' life to be held at a later date.

Regarding the Path to Impeachment

Chairman Nadler was very clear in his TV interviews on Thursday that the Judiciary Committee's efforts to investigate whether Articles of Impeachment should be issued against Trump are an Inquiry into Impeachment as established in Article I of the U.S. Constitution.

No promises as to outcome, but the House's inquiry is now protected by the Constitution's clear designation of the House's rights. This doesn't mean that Trump et al won't continue to try to use frivolous defenses, but it does mean that the House's demands will be very hard to defeat in Court, a/k/a Judiciary = Third Branch of Government!

Work for people, not PACs

Tuesday's carefully crafted, full-page ad from one of the largest dark-money super PACs thanks Sen. John Cornyn for "voting to protect the free market in Medicare." I do hope readers of this ad will scoff at the implication that Cornyn is a defender of Medicare.

He is not. Plain and simple, his voting record and statements show that he looks to the benefits paid for Medicare and Social Security as the place to reduce the huge deficit he and the GOP created. Benefits that seniors have earned over a lifetime of hard work are in danger. Cornyn, most likely at the behest of dark-money Super PACs, is reported to be working towards eventual elimination of those benefits seniors have earned over the decades.

If the senator is truly concerned about the huge deficit he worked to create, he'd spend his energy to undo the damage caused by the transfer of wealth from the middle class to the super wealthy by the 2018 Trump tax.

Senator, quit following the instructions of the dark-money Super PACs and the wealthy people funding them. Instead, work for the people who elected you. Undo the damage you have caused.

My Letter to the Editor this morning about Texas' senator, John Cornyn, has been at the forefront in creating the disastrous, so-called tax reform legislation in 2017 that has worsened our deficit. One of the worst Dark Money Super PACs paid for a full page ad in the newspaper to thank Cornyn for protecting Medicare.

Absolute horse-pucky. Cornyn and others are working to cut Medicare and Social Security benefits as a way to reduce the deficit he helped to make worse.
